INDEX TO COURT RECORD BOOKS

In examining the Court of Common Plea records in New England it is not uncommon to find them indexed by Plaintiff alphabetically.

If we were looking for records concerning Henry ADAMS and checked the "A" index list we would not find him listed.

The next step would be to go through the defendants side of the various pages and look for our Henry ADAMS.

As the defendant side of the index pages are not listed alphabetically, but are listed at random it would be a good policy to check every page.

In a check of the random listings of defendants we will find our Henry ADAMS listed in a case with John DARK. There could be other entries so check all other pages.

Each record book generally has its own index which may appear in the front or back and in some cases there may be a separate index book.

Look for these records at the County Courthouse in the county you are interested in and at the office of the Clerk of Court.

These records may not have a lot of genealogical information but will serve to locate an ancestor you may be looking.

These records will give a time period that the ancestor existed at the places mentioned in the records.

Putting these things together we can locate a given ancestor in specific place and at a definite time period. Using this information we can then search other record types that exist for the place indicated in the court records.

In any court action there is always at least two parties involved, the plaintiff, and the defendant. This article should serve to show you that you must always search both indexes always to be certain that your search is complete.
